

Bosch Healthcare Stand Attracts Attention at NHS Confederation Conference

The Bosch health care stand which was present at the NHS Confederation Conference from 6th-8th July was a huge success. The stand was visited by Health Secretary Andrew Lansley and Sir David Nicholson, Chief Executive of the NHS in England which was a highlight of the show.

Thanks to our partnership and Eman Martin-Vignerte's (Bosch Healthcare UK Sales) excellent relationship with NHS Confederation Chair Sir Keith Pearson, it was arranged that both spent more than 5 minutes with us to learn about our telehealth system.

Martin Tasler (Bosch PJM Germany) was happy to demonstrate a CHF session to Andrew Lansley, and explained the benefits of our system in detail. Lansley mentioned he is familiar with the Bosch telehealth system from the Health Innovation Expo in March this year, and he asked questions about conditions, the patients, and our projects in the UK.

Sir David worked for 10 years in mental health, mainly in Yorkshire, and was very interested to learn more about our projects and how the system works. He was supportive and pleased that Bosch has the first telehealth pilot in West Yorkshire region. Eman informed Sir David that our telehealth system supports national QIPP (Quality, Innovation, Productivity and Prevention) methodology to address quality and efficiency challenges and at the same time ensuring patients get better care and improved quality of life.

Finally Lansley and Sir David were very happy to receive a copy of the "125 anniversary Bosch" book, when we handed them over.

Altogether the day was a great success in raising awareness for Bosch Healthcare and moving us forward in the telehealth market.
